BIO

Born in Baton Rouge, Louisiana at the Earl K. Long Medical Center in 1997, Paul Onyinye Olele Jr. has had a knack for music since he was a kid. His Nigerian upbringing introduced him to the beautiful sounds of Afrobeats. As he grew older, his love for hip-hop grew as he started to listen to the likes of Lil Wayne, Wale and The Game. This love for music is what kick started his DJ career in the year of 2013.

When he relocated to Washington D.C area in his teenage years, he reconnected with his childhood friend and rapper, AkinG Kalld Pedro, as his personal DJ. Together the duo began performing at several locations across the D.C area from 2017 till date. DJ Paul has recently featured in AkinG Kalld Pedro's video, "Traffic Jam," off his Surrealism project released in 2019.

Aside from being a Disc Jockey, DJ Paul is also a music producer and a freelance writer for a Nigerian business newspaper, Nairametrics. He has also previously worked with the Nigerian-American rapper, Jidenna, as a social media intern. DJ Paul has also worked with the Beat 99.9 FM in Lagos, Nigeria as an intern, where he helped to break songs from underground artists. He is current graduate from the George Washington University with a B.A in Africana Studies and a minor in Media & Communications.
